

Unit 4 Vocabulary

Two lines with the same slope but different

y-intercept (Parallel Lines)

Two lines with slopes that are opposite reciprocals

(Perpendicular Lines)

The number $-a$ is called the opposite of a .

The number $\frac{1}{a}$ is called the reciprocal of a .

Unit 4 Vocabulary

Two lines with the same slope but different

y-intercept (Parallel Lines)

Two lines with slopes that are opposite
reciprocals

(Perpendicular Lines)

The number $-a$ is called the opposite of a .

The number $\frac{1}{a}$ is called the reciprocal of a .

Unit 4 Vocabulary

Two lines with the same slope but different

y-intercept (Parallel Lines)

Two lines with slopes that are opposite
reciprocals

(Perpendicular Lines)

The number $-a$ is called the opposite of a .

The number $\frac{1}{a}$ is called the reciprocal of a .

Unit 4 Vocabulary

Two lines with the same slope but different

y-intercept (Parallel Lines)

Two lines with slopes that are opposite
reciprocals

(Perpendicular Lines)

The number $-a$ is called the opposite of a .

The number $\frac{1}{a}$ is called the reciprocal of a .

Unit 4 Vocabulary

Two lines with the same slope but different

y-intercept (Parallel Lines)

Two lines with slopes that are opposite
reciprocals

(Perpendicular Lines)

The number $-a$ is called the opposite of a .

The number $\frac{1}{a}$ is called the reciprocal of a .

Unit 4 Vocabulary

Two lines with the same slope but different

y-intercept (Parallel Lines)

Two lines with slopes that are opposite
reciprocals

(Perpendicular Lines)

The number $-a$ is called the opposite of a .

The number $\frac{1}{a}$ is called the reciprocal of a .