Motto (which is Italian for "word"): a short expression of a guiding principle.

Most mottoes are statements of faith or advice, which are serious in nature. Others are humorous thoughts to remind us not to take ourselves too seriously.

When displayed, the motto normally appears on a scroll or ribbon beneath the shield (the supporters stand on this ribbon). The exception is for Scottish Armorials where it usually appears on a ribbon above the top of the crest. In rare instances where more than one motto has been adopted, they are often both displayed above the crest, or one above the crest and one below the shield. When two ribbons are present, one might contain the name of the bearer of the arms while the other contains the motto.

What do you do well?

"Art is the reward of art" – "Ars gratia artis"

Forever and Always
Get back into the game
Honor above all
Honor is Duty, and Duty is Honor
I will flow like the wind and no sword shall land upon me
If it's not worth doing right - it's not worth doing at all
In Service to the Dream
Life is passion, passion is art.
No one ever learned anything while they were talking
On this moment hangs eternity
Strength in Diversity
Strength through Knowledge
Successful people don't know the word can't
Sure and steadfast
Tend your own fires
That passed by, so may this
The joy is in the doing
There can never be enough heraldic display
There is no right way to do something wrong
There is nothing I cannot do - There are only things I have not done
Through the narrow way
Time and tide wait for no man
Time passes as a shadow
Timing is everything
Strive to serve and not to yield
Try Harder
When in doubt, dance
Winners always find a way - losers always find an excuse
